

Driveway Approach Assessment

(Updated: October 25, 2010)

A driveway approach shall be considered defective when exhibiting one or more of the following characteristics:

- 1. Improperly constructed driveway approaches, such as those constructed with a non-formed joint (sledge-hammer, etc.) with the street, are the property owner's responsibility to repair.
- 2. If the driveway approach extends into the pavement and is integral with the curb and gutter (as with a lugout), the property owner's responsibility extends to the joint.
- 3. An improperly constructed driveway approach and the joint with the edge of the street pavement will allow surface runoff to undermine the street.
